Historical Happenings

January 24	Washington, D.C. The Supreme Court has ruled that an income tax imposed during the Civil War was constitutional.
July 2	Washington, D.C. President Garfield Shot President Garfield was shot and critically wounded early today as he walked through the waiting room of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Station. The two shots, one in the back and one in the arm, were fired by Charles J. Guiteau, a disappointed office-seeker from New York, who was quickly seized.
July 4	New Mexico Territory After a lifetime of murder and years on the run from the law, William H. "Billy the Kid" Bonney is dead, slain by Sheriff Pat Garett at Fort Sumner. The "Kid" was 21 years old.
July 20	Fort Buford, Canada Sitting Bull, long in hiding, gives up. A fugitive for the past five years since he directed the massacre of General Custer and his troops at Little Big Horn, the Sioux Chief Sitting Bull surrendered to army authorities today.
September 20	President James Garfield Dead, Arthur succeeds him. Chester Alan Arthur of New York became President in the early hours this morning. The new President took his oath of office at 2:05 a.m. in his New York City home. The late President had been sinking since he was shot on July 2 by Charles J. Guiteau. Death came at the seaside resort of Elberon, New Jersey where it was hoped the sea air might prove beneficial in curing the blood poisoning that set in after doctors used unsterile instruments to probe for the bullet in his back.
October 22	Boston, Massachusetts Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its first concert.
Boston	Publishers forced to withdraw new edition of Walt Whitman's Leaves of Grass, in response to charges of indecency.
Seattle, Washington	It appears that the Territory of Alaska is going to be earning its keep a lot sooner than anyone could have expected. Gold was discovered by Joe Juneau and Frank Harris, two miners of questionable sobriety. It is said the gold strike may be large enough to support a town. Residents laugh out loud when they hear Joe Juneau insist the town be named in his honor.

This is the only article found of a railroad accident on or about the same time as referred to in the diary.

Woonsocket Patriot
Friday, February 18, 1881

FRANKLIN.

A large force of men was engaged the entire day Tuesday, removing the debris of Monday's railroad accident, which was more serious than at first reported. For 300 yards the embankment was strewn with fragments of broken cars and their contents. Two box cars and three dump cars are still down the bank, and the latter badly demolished. Upon leaving the main track the engine started down the siding and collided with a train which was loading with sugar at the beet sugar mill. One car containing fourteen hogsheads of sugar, and another containing twenty casks of syrup, were overturned, and a large part of the sugar and syrup lost. The damage to the Beet Sugar Corporation is not estimated. Beside the damage to the cars on the two freights, the engine was partially wrecked, the hand-car used by the section hands demolished, and the rails damaged.

President Garfield's Death!

AFTER EIGHTY DAYS OF PAIN.

The Details of the Last Sad Event.

THE INQUEST AND AUTOPSY.

Many Affecting Scenes and Incidents.

THE FUNERAL CEREMONIES.

James A. Garfield, President of the United States, who was shot by Charles J. Guiteau at Washington, July 2, died at Long Branch, N. J., at 10,35 o clock last Monday evening, after 11 weeks and 3 days of suffering. Although everybody at Long Branch, as elsewhere, had been prepared to expect the worst by the extremely unfavorable news of the past few days, the announcement of the President's death was a sudden shock when it came. It was but a few minutes before the end that he gave evidence of a rapid decline, and even his immediate attendants were taken by surprise.

THE DEATH-BED SCENE.

Dr. Boynton gives the following account of the death scene: He had been sleeping quietly until about 15 minutes before his death, when I stepped into the room to examine his pulse. It had grown a little weaker but was not alarmingly weakened. I remarked to Swaim that his pulse had grown weaker, but not dangerously weak, when he exclaimed 'Oh, Swaim! what a terrible pain I have here!' And he placed his hand upon his breast over his heart. The doctors and members of the family by that time gathered. There was scarcely a perceptible movement anywhere in his features, and no movement of the limbs, but his pulse grew less frequent. Dr. Agnew bent over him and examined his pulse. He found no pulse. I put my ear down to his heart, but discovered no pulsation. Mrs. Garfield placed her hand upon his chest, partly bending over him till after he died. All sat there a little while and then left the room. The first time Mrs. Garfield broke down in tears was when she was left at her room. She returned in half an hour.

Dr. Bliss says: He was not conscious after I arrived. The attendants did not fully realize his condition. He had spoken to Swaim only a moment before, and he could not believe that the end was coming so soon. As I entered the room I saw that all would soon be over, and I exclaimed? 'My God, Swaim, he is dying! Send for Mrs. Garfield.' He was never conscious after that, and did not speak. When I got to the sick room I found the President pulseless. His heart was slightly fluttering. The apparent cause of death was neuralgia of the heart, of which we had symptoms before in the history of the case. It was not probably embolism. He suffered acute pain for a moment; after that his death was painless. He was awakened by the attack."

The illustrious sufferer passed away almost quietly. The line between life and death was marked by no physical exhibition nor any word. There was absolutely no scene. The intervals between the gasping became longer, and presently there was no sound. Every one present knew that death had come quietly, without pain. When it became evident that he was dead Mrs. Rockwell placed her arm around Mrs. Garfield and let her quietly from the room. One by one the spectators left the scene, the doctors only remaining in the room, and the windows were closed. Directly afterward Private Secretary Brown telegraphed the boys, James and Harry, at Williams College, Mass., and Mrs. Eliza Garfield. Those were the first dispatches sent after the death.

MRS. GARFIELD

bears up bravely and heroically under her terrible affliction, but poor Mollie gave way to the wildest grief.

The appearance of the dead statesman is natural. It shows emaciation, as would be inevitable after his long period of sickness and suffering, but the physicians say that after being embalmed the emaciation will be less noticeable. It is probable that a plaster cast will be taken of the features. The extreme emaciation of the President was a surprise to the undertaker and the embalmer. It is possible to clasp the leg above the knee with one hand.

THE AUTOPSY

yesterday revealed the fact that the ball perforated the spine, and death was inevitable from the first. The surgeons were entirely ignorant of the location of the bullet.

The Garfield fund is rapidly increasing, and bids fair to reach a million dollars.

THE PRESIDENT'S MOTHER

bore the news with great fortitude after the first shock. "God knows best, and I must not murmur," she said.

VICE PRESIDENT ARTHUR

was notified immediately on the death of the President, and took the oath of office at his residence in New York at 2.15 o'clock yesterday morning, before Hon. John P. Brady, Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, in accordance with the suggestion of the Cabinet, and soon after left by special train for Long Branch.

THE ASSASSIN.

District Attorney Corkhill of Washington says of Guiteau: "There is plenty of law to try him at the Capital, where the crime was committed."

President Arthur will retain the present Cabinet. Mr. Arthur had a very affecting interview with Mrs. Garfield yesterday, during which she exhorted him to "continue the glories of her husband's administration."

THE FUNERAL.

The arrangements for the funeral are in all respects intended to comply with the wishes of Mrs. Garfield, and will be as free from ostentation as possible. A special train will leave Long Branch this morning for Washington, where the remains will lie in state in the rotunda of the capital Thursday and Friday, leaving Friday night for Cleveland, where they will lie in state on Sunday. The funeral will take place on Monday in Cleveland, and in accordance with the frequently expressed wish of the President the remains will be interred in the Lake View cemetery in Cleveland.
